

PARTNERSHIP of the TIDE

BY JEFFERSON Author "CAP'N ERI"

ONLY CAUSE IS THAT PIPES HAVE GIVEN AWAY

So Says Article In Louisville Times In Regard to the Sudden Ceasing of Gas In Cloverport.

Edmund Wroe, of Cloverport, Ky., one of the best-known young attorneys of Breckenridge county, is in Louisville to-day on legal business, and will probably be here for several days. Mr. Wroe is well known in Louisville and many friends here.

Mr. Wroe says that the supply of natural gas there, about the first to be discovered in Kentucky, has suddenly ceased, and it has put the people of the town to a great inconvenience, the town depending on natural gas for the lighting of buildings. When the gas was discovered in Cloverport it set in state all apace, and for months after capitalists flocked there with a view of booming the town.

"The only cause that can be assigned for the sudden ceasing of the gas to flow is that the pipes which case the wells have given away. An effort will be made to repair the wells if this is the case," said Mr. Wroe to a reporter for the Times, Louisville Times.

NEW WELLS

Will Be Drilled To Increase
Supply of Gas--Old Wells
To Be Cleaned.

The Cloverport Pipe Line Co. is making preparations to put down more wells in the immediate future to increase the supply of gas. The rigging has been purchased and is now on the grounds.

The old wells will undergo a thorough cleaning-out and the derricks are now being raised to that end. The flow of gas will be as strong as ever, it is claimed, when this is done. Water accumulating in the wells in the past few weeks has curtailed to some extent the supply, but this will be remedied immediately, says the company.

The increased demand for gas, principally for the factories and foundry, has decided the company to put down more wells.

Join the Army.

Louis and Harrison Blake, sons of Mr. George Blake, of Hardinsburg, left a few days ago for the Columbus, O., to begin to begin soldiers' lives. They were recruited at the local recruiting station last week.

Delightful Social.

The members of the Epworth League and a large number of invited guests were delightfully entertained New Year's eve in the Sunday School room of the Methodist church by the social committee, Misses Loua Savers and Grace Plank and President David Phelps.

The amusements were in keeping with the season and delicious refreshments were served.

TAYLOR--VENABLE.

The marriage of Dr. R. Homan Taylor of Owensboro, to Miss Olla Venable, of Alice, Texas, was solemnized at the home of the bride, on Wednesday, December 26.

Dr. Taylor is a dentist of Owensboro, and is a young man of high standing, both socially and professionally. He is well and favorably known in Cloverport, having frequently been here in the interest of his profession. The bride is a native of Texas.

They will be at home in Owensboro after January 15.

Real Estate Deals.

The following real estate deals have been effected within the last few days: John C. Furrow to L. C. Johnson, 15 acres, near the turnpike, two miles east of Cloverport. Consideration, $225.00.

Wm. H. Bower to W. N. Pate, 73 acres, on Beech Fork of Clover Creek, about five miles from Cloverport. Consideration, $180.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Payne gave a dinner Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Severs, of Virginia. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Corbett, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Lightfoot, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Severs, Mr. and Mrs. Payne, Miss Loua Savers and J. Byrne Severs.

REMARKABLE STORY OF A LOST WATCH.

A Dover telegram, dated Friday afternoon, contains the following remarkable story of the loss and subsequent finding of a stem-winding watch by the sheriff of the county. Many curious and hard-to-believe stories are told nowadays, but this one is more than conditioned to hold its own with that have been reported in the papers. The following is the sum and substance of the telegram:

"Sheriff Turner is showing as his Christmas present a stem-winding case watch that he claims has a history unmatched by any other watch in Tennessee, and doubts if there is another like it in the whole country. In December, 1905, while hunting in the 'coaling' he lost the watch, and though he searched carefully for it, he was unable to find it. He gave it up for lost, and had forgotten all about it. Last week Logan McCraw and Alex. Holliday went rabbit hunting in the 'coaling', and, raising a rabbit, McCraw fired and missed, then Holliday fired just as the rabbit ran into a hole and killed it. McCraw ran hastily to the hole, put his hand in and pulled out the rabbit, and was surprised to see something shining at the mouth of the hole. He stooped over and picked up the sheriff's watch and yelled 'By Jakes!' when he heard it ticking, and both were astonished when the watch was opened to find it was the same watch he had lost. They then looked at the rabbit and the secret was out, for there on its belly the fur had been rubbed off in a place that exactly fitted the stem of the watch, showing that the rabbit had kept it wound up by rubbing against the stem as it went in and out of the hole. The sheriff will not tell the make of the watch, only saying it is a 'rabbit watch.'"

ANOTHER SALE OF EQUITY TOBACCO.

The executive committee of the Green River district, A. S. of E., has made another big sale of tobacco, consisting of all the 1905 trash put up in Ohio county and at Livermore, McLean county. This information was given out Saturday on reliable authority, though the sale has not yet been officially announced.

The price paid was $6.75 a hundred, probably the best price that has been paid this year for any considerable quantity of Green river trash. The name of the purchaser is not known. The deal was closed through the Louisville Warehouse company, where the tobacco has been stored for several months past.

The sale of such a large quantity of tobacco is a good start in the disposing of the 1905 crop. A member of the district committee states that deals are pending for the sale of 1905 tobacco in Davies and other counties of the district. No trouble is anticipated in disposing of all 1905 tobacco at good prices. Owensboro Messenger.

CHAPTER I.

"WAS you callated to buy one of them turnovers, huh?" casually inquired Mr. Clark, ceasing to gaze at his steaming bowls, which were planted against the bulging center of the station stove, and turning toward the boy at the lunch counter.

"Yes, sir," said the boy. He had taken off one worsted mitten and held a five cent piece clutched tightly in his red fist.

The station agent wrapped the pastry in a piece of newspaper and handed it to his customer.

The boy, a youngster of about twelve years of age, with a freckled face and a pair of bright gray eyes, took his "turnover" to the settler in the corner of the waiting room and began to eat. He had on a worn cloth cap with an attachment that could be pulled down to cover the ears and a shabby overcoat of man's size, very much too large for him. As he munched the greasy crust and the thin layer of "turnover" the people he looked around him with interest.

The station itself was like the average railway building on Cape Cod. Except for the sign "Hardinsburg" hung outside it might have been the station at Wellmouth, which he had seen so often. Battered settees around the walls, lithographs of steamers, time tables and year old announcements of excursions and other fairs hung above them; big stove set in a box of sawdust--all these were the regulation fixtures. Regulation also were the "refreshments" on the counter at the side--"turnovers" arranged cobhouse fashion under a glass cover, with a dingy "Washington" pie under another cover and jars of striped stick candy, with boxes of "jaw-breakers" and similar sweetmeats between.

It was snowing hard, and in the dusk of the winter evening the flakes rustled against the windows as if unseen old ladies in starched summer gowns were shivering in the storm and crowding to get a peep within.

The air in the shut waiting room smelled of hot stove, sawdust, wet clothing and Mr. Clark's cigar. To this collection of perfumes was presently added the odor of kerosene as the station agent lit the big lamps in their brackets on the wall.

From outside came the sounds of creaking wheels and stamping horses, the stamping muffled by the snow which covered the ground.

The door opened, and a big man with a face of which gray whiskers and red nose were the most prominent features came stamping and puffing into the room. He jerked off a pair of leather gloves, playfully shook the congealed moisture from them down Mr. Clark's neck, and then, toward a corner, he whipped into the corner and, holding his spread fingers over the stove, began to say "Whos, Emma!" with enthusiasm.

Mr. Clark, being too busy cleaning his melting snow from his neck to open a conversation, Mr. Bodkin observed: "Hello, Barney Small! How's the travel?"

"Oh, middlin', middlin'," replied the driver of the Orham stage, unbuttoning his overcoat and reaching for his pipe. "But this earth's a ver of a snowbox, so what's the odds so long as you're happy. Hello, Dan!" The last a shouted greeting to the station agent in the little room, whose answer was a wave of the hand and a sidelong nod across the telegraph instrument.

"What'da old' over in Orham, Barney?" inquired Mr. Clark.

"Prissy and Tempy's adopted a boy." The agent evidently was interested.

"The old maids?"

"Tup, the old maids. I s'pose they come to realize that they need a man 'round the house, but as there wa'n't no bids in that line they sort of compromised on a boy."

"You don't mean the Allen old maids that live down on the 'lower road,' do you?" asked Mr. Bodkin.

"Sartin. I said the old maids, didn't I? There's plenty of single women in Orham, but when you say 'the old maids' in our town everybody knows you mean Prissy and Tempy."

"What about the boy, Barney?" said the station agent, coming into the waiting room.

"Why?" said Mr. Small. "It's this way: Beedus here, Prissy and Tempy's father, old Cap'n Druis Allen--he's been dead six years or more now--had a niece named of Sophia, that married Cap'n Ben Nickerson over to Wellmouth. Cap'n Ben and his wife had one son. I think the boy's name's Bradley. Anyhow Cap'n Ben and his wife was drowned off the Portuguese coast two years ago when Ben's bark was lost. Maybe you remember? Well, the boy was left at home that voyage with Ben's half brother, Solar Nickerson, so's the youngster could go to school. When his folks was drowned, that was the boy seen on 'fiver' with Solar till 'bout three weeks ago Solar was took with pneumonia and up and died. Prissy and Tempy's the only relations there was, you see, so it was left to them to say what should be done with the boy. I callate there must have been some high old powerful in the home, but the old maids are pretty conscientious spite of their bein' so evarlastin' 'old maids'; and they finally decided 'twas their duty to take the little feller to bring up. That's the way I heard the yarn. They kept it a secret until yesterday, but now the whole town's talkin' 'bout it. You see it's such a good joke for them two to have a boy in the house. Why, Prissy's been used to shooin' every stray boy off the place as if he was a ben."

Mr. Small laughed so heartily at this that the others joined in. When the hilarity had subsided the station agent asked:

"Whos's the Nickerson boy comin' over from Wellmouth?"

"Why, today, come to think of it. He was to come up on the afternoon train from Wellmouth and go to Orham with me tonight. You ain't seen nothin'?"

The station agent interrupted him with a sidelong movement out of the best seat.

"Tup, he's in company with Mr. Clark and Mr. Bodkin, turned toward the corner of the waiting room."

Mr. Small had bought the apple "turnover" having finished the last crumb of that viand, had turned to the window and was looking out through a hole he had scraped in the frost on the pane. He had shaded his face with his hands to shut out the lamplight, and, though he must have heard the conversation, his manner betrayed no interest in it.

Mr. Small interrogated the station agent by raising his eyebrows. The agent whistled, "Shooin' on the train and added, "He came on the up train this afternoon."

"Eiy, boy," said Mr. Clark, who never let conversation and other people interfere with his own curiosity, "what's your name?"

The boy turned from the window and, blinking a little as the light struck his eyes, faced the group by the stove. His freckled cheeks glistened as the light shone upon them; but, as if he knew this, he pulled his big slanting boy the overcoat across his face and rubbed them dry.

"What's your name, sonny?" said the stage driver kindly.

"Nickerson," said the boy in a low tone.

"I want to know. Your first name ain't Bradley, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Sho, well, there now! Guess you're goin' to ride over with me then. I drive the Orham coach. Hum, well, I declare!" And Mr. Small pulled his beard in an embarrassed fashion.

"Come over to the stove and get warm, won't you?" asked the station agent.

"I ain't cold," was the reply.

The trio by the stove fidgeted in silence for a few moments, and then Mr. Small said matterly, "Ain't it 'most time for that train to be in? She's a half hour late now."

"She was twenty-five minutes late at Sandwich," said the station agent.

"She's probably lost ten minutes or so now. She'll be along in a little while now."

But in spite of this cheerful prophecy a full fifteen minutes passed before the train, which had been started from

OLD CITIZEN DEAD.

Mr. Chas. Elder Passes Away At His Home Near Town.

Mr. Chas. Elder died at his home, near town last Saturday morning at an early hour. He had been ill for about two weeks of a complication of diseases.

Mr. Elder was one of the county's oldest citizens, being in his seventy-third year. He was widely known in the county and was highly respected. He leaves a wife and several children.

The funeral was conducted from the Catholic church in Hardinsburg, and the body was buried in the Catholic cemetery at that place.

Buried at Stephensport.

On Dec. 20, 1906, the remains of Mrs. Mary Jane Basham, wife of Henry W. Basham, deceased, was brought here for burial. Mrs. Basham was born August 21, 1829, died Dec. 19, 1906. She was a Miss Ray before marriage. She leaves one son, two grand-children, one brother, Mr. J. Ray, Rhodelia, two sisters, Mrs. Leon Cashman, Raymond, and Mrs. Wm. Rhodes, Brandenburg.

Aunt Jane, as she was often called, died at the home of her son, F. W. died at the home of paralysis. When twenty-three years of age she joined the Baptist church, but later in life joined the M. E. South at Union Star, of which she was a member at the time of her death. Twenty-two months ago her husband died and she has only been waiting to join him in that bright home above.

The funeral discourse was conducted by Rev. B. M. Currie, Cloverport, and Rev. Felix Roberts, Stephensport. The family have the sympathy of the community in this great bereavement. Their loss is her gain.

THE GAS COMPANY.

The statement concerning the local gas company on our first page, copied from the Louisville Times and said to have been made by Mr. Edmund Wroe, of this city, was, Mr. Wroe states never made by him. In any event the statement is true and the sudden ceasing of the town's supply of gas is due, not to the natural supply being exhausted, but to the negligence of the parties operating the wells and the pipe lines. Had the gas wells in Cloverport been properly attended to and cared for during the summer months, the present gas conditions would never have come about. The parties who have charge of the local gas supply have been negligent in the past and their customers have suffered. But the sins of the past should be buried with the past. Now that the parties operating the wells have brought new rigging to town and are attempting to give their customers good service, let us be silent and allow them an opportunity to redeem the past. According to men who know, the natural supply of gas in and about Cloverport, has not been exhausted and will not be for many years to come. It stands now for the gas company to give the people of Cloverport good service and respond to the call of public sentiment and get down and out.

SLOWER SPEED BASIS.

Following is copy of telegram which Mr. T. C. Powell, Fifth Vice-President of the Southern Railway has just received from Mr. Finley, President of this company:

"Owing to the crowded condition of its single track lines, and the double track work including the revision of grades and alignment, now under way, for the purpose of relieving the crowded condition of the crowded single tracks, the Southern Railway Company finds it difficult to maintain the schedules of some of its passenger trains as now scheduled, and will, in consequence, in the early part of January ensuing, revise these schedules, putting them on the basis of slower speed with the expectation of being able to maintain them and believing that under the circumstances this arrangement will be more satisfactory to the public.

The double track work being vigorously pushed and on other parts of the road where double track work is not now under way, but where traffic is heavy, passing tracks are being put in, and those already in extended, in order to facilitate the movement of trains—all such passing track work being done with the ultimate object of utilizing it as double track when double track work may be undertaken in those localities.

The improvement in passenger train movement will naturally improve the movement of freight trains.

The Southern Railway Company has arranged to shorten its operating divisions, increasing the number from fourteen to twenty-seven, each one of these divisions to be in charge of a superintendent. Men now in the service

Were Their Votes Counted

Women were permitted to vote at Glen Ridge, N. J., the other day, the proposition being to retain the post office at that fashionable suburb, or to have mail delivery from the Bloomfield office. 369 men and 360 women voted—another instance of women voting when they had a chance. A separate ballot box was provided for the women's vote.

Winter Watermelons.

Winter watermelons are the last novelty offered by the high price fruiters. They come from Colorado and attain their growth so late that they are just now in the market. They are costly, rather pale in color, both to their exterior green and their interior pink, and have no particularly strong taste of any kind. They have found place on the menus of the fashionable restaurants, however, and may soon be in popularity with the alligator pear

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request. Be sure that this picture is the form of a label on the wrapper of every bottle of Scott's Emulsion you buy.
